Staycations on Unique Islands in Malaysia

Go on, you deserve a break

Dear Member,

You've worked hard into the new year. You've put effort into your new year's resolutions. And here we are in the second quarter of the year!

It's time to treat yourself to a break. And why not? Research has shown that Germany – with the shortest average working hours a day – has one of the highest productivity rates in the world. Arguably, it's because they take their rest seriously, that they can focus even more on their work.

The good news is, you don't have to go far afield to enjoy a holiday. Malaysia is one of the world's favourite destinations for vacations. So, we as Malaysians should take advantage of our own backyard, so to speak.

In this issue, we continue our exploration of "staycations" within our own beautiful country, with a spotlight on island getaways that won't cost you an arm and a leg. We also give you a few pointers on how to get the best out of a beach barbecue buffet – the most likely thing to enjoy while on an island holiday.

And then, for fun, we take a look back into our past childhoods for a taste of some favourite junk food that we used to enjoy so much (but probably won't want our children to follow along)! We also feature some "weird sports", so that you can have something else to entertain you besides the sports you see on TV.

As always, we also bring you the news from your favourite club and our other sister clubs. Stay informed of the happenings at our clubs, make your plans to be there, and I'll see you at the club!

Wishes everyone Happy Parents Day & Selamat Hari Raya.

Yours faithfully,

Khor Poh Waa

For most families, vacations abroad decorate their holidays. The destinations are determined by the preference of the family members, and it may be a nature destination, a safari in Africa or a resort on some unique island. However, due to hard economic times, we at times need to look for cheaper ways of getting away. Staycations are holidays that you can take within your own country, and it may include visiting local museums, taking hikes in local beautiful nature getaways or getting away to local beaches. Malaysia is a beautiful country with a great number of beach destinations that you can get away to. But how do you decide where to go? Here are several factors that you should keep in mind.

AFFORDABILITY

Ensure that you can afford the destination you have in mind. Picking a destination that you cannot afford might rope you into a crazy credit card bill. The affordability should, however, not compromise on important amenities.

LOCATION

Consider the activities that you intend to partake in. If you want to go hiking and sightseeing, ensure that the location you have chosen is in close proximity to a place you can go sightseeing. If you want the sandy beaches and the ocean, a getaway to an island might be a better option.

be better so that they can run around with other kids.

AMENITIES

While picking a resort, ensure that it has all the amenities required by your family. If you have kids, ensure that the resort you are headed to is kid-friendly and has a safe section where the kids can play.

ACTIVITIES

There are a number of affordable and fun activities that you can do while on a staycation on an island. Some of them are:

BEACH VOLLEYBALL

If the resort that you have picked is situated in a place in close proximity to the beach, you and your family can play volleyball. All that is needed is a ball.

SIGHTSEEING

We have free and beautiful spots that you can go sightseeing. In an island, caves and woods might be ideal and affordable places to go hiking and exploring.

PRIVACY

For a honeymoon or a couple's getaway, a private destination would be ideal. However, for families with kids, a relatively crowded destination would

KAYAKING

Kayaking is a simple and affordable way to have fun. If you are crazy about water and the sea, you will love kayaking.

So, now you know what to look for and what to do, but the question remains – where do you go for an affordable yet perfect island staycation in Malaysia?

BERJAYA TIOMAN RESORT

Traveling to the resort for anyone living in Malaysia is simple, and you can either make a road trip out of it by driving there with your family, or sit at the window of a bus and watch as nature pass by as you travel and afterward, board a ferry to the island.

This resort stands out for several reasons. First, it has a number of inbuilt facilities like the spa massage, manicure and snorkelling packages for the patrons. The architecture of the different cottages will make you stop and stare first for a few minutes. Their colour is a mixture of pink and brown, and the pavements running through the buildings are quite outstanding.

You will fall in love with the rooms, which are spacious without compromising on homey. The beds are big enough to comfortably accommodate two people, and the bathroom is spotless and spacious enough. All this is at quite an affordable price!

BERJAYA REDANG ISLAND RESORT

If what you have in mind is a semi-enclosed beach and clear waters that are safe to swim in, Berjaya Island Resort is the destination to head to. This stunning resort is located in Redang Island, a destination you can fly to or drive over, then use a ferry to get to the island.

The inbuilt facilities for this resort vary, depending on age and preference. There are indoor games for children, a clean pool, scuba diving and island hiking in nearby islands. They even have a karaoke room for the music lovers. The food is tasty and in a wide variety, right from local dishes to international cuisines.

In short, if you are looking for a place to just let your hair down and let go a bit, this is the resort for you.

The beauty of getting away is that you get to choose where to eat, and most times, you will eat outside the resort. You can have breakfast at the resort, then for lunch, go to a local restaurant. Evenings can be decorated with beach buffets, which are a chance to eat outside as you breathe in the fresh breeze. Plus, you get to eat barefoot, by choice of course.

There you have it, an inexpensive way to have fun during your vacation. More so, you don't need a huge budget to get away!

FROM SMART > ELECTRIC > SELF-DRIVING CARS

Modern mankind is in love with their cars. Yet, since the 1970s, awareness of cars' effect of polluting the planet and depleting resources has increased among consumers. In an attempt to address this serious strain on our planet's natural environment, "green" cars have begun to take over the market – or so the trend seems to be. A green car is a vehicle that uses alternative power – such as electricity – instead of petrol. This type of vehicle is eco-friendly because it emits fewer environmental pollutants.

The Smart Car

The iconic (and tiny) Smart Car was the brainchild of Nicolas Hayek. Hayek wanted to build a small car that would be environmentally sensitive and would also use very little fuel. The first prototype of the Smart Car was first shown in 1997.

Still popular today, the original model features two seats with a rear engine, and is short enough to be backed into a parallel parking space. In fact, two Smart Cars can easily fit into one parking spot. The vehicle has a semi-automatic transmission and is controlled by an electronic stabilizer. Daimler-Benz is now the owner of the Smart Car concept, which basically sought to reduce resource consumption with a small build requiring less materials, and a super-efficient engine that consumes less fuel.

Electric Cars

Electric cars have long been experimented with, but really came into popular acceptance at the onset of this century. Today, more than 25 models of electric vehicles are on the market, with the Tesla cars being the current market leader.

The problem with electrically-powered vehicles, however, is that they can only travel a shorter range without a recharge, compared to petrol-powered cars with full tanks. Engineers are constantly working on chargers that can input more electric power, batteries that can store more, and a way to recharge electric cars with regular electrical wall sockets, so that these cars can go on indefinitely.

Hybrid Cars

Before fully-electric cars became economically viable, manufacturers experimented successfully with hybrid cars that would run on an electric motor at cruising speeds, with a regular petrol engine that would kick in when more power was needed. The petrol engine as well the braking action of the car would also recharge the battery, allowing it to go for much longer periods than a fully-electric battery could. The first and most popular hybrid car to market was the famous Toyota Prius.

Self-driving or Autonomous Cars

While Google is working on a truly driverless car, semi-autonomous cars already exist, which function similarly to the autopilot of an airplane. That is, these cars' navigational computers are good enough to handle routine driving tasks, but require a qualified human driver to take over for complex manoeuvres and emergencies. Tesla cars already ship with this assisted-driving feature, while manufacturers race to be the first to perfect truly self-driving cars.

Are any Green/Smart Cars Available Today?

There are many green vehicles on the market. These cars decrease petrol emissions and help to minimise air pollution. Hybrids like the Prius are also available, as are mini-electric cars, small-carbon-footprint cars such as the Smart Car, and eco-friendly, urban vehicles.

Ford, Mercedes, Honda, BMW – the list goes on – already offer electric vehicles, or hybrids that use both petrol or diesel and electricity. What might be market-ready around the corner in the near future, though? Let your imagination soar!

New technologies such as V2V (Vehicle-to-Vehicle communication) are being tried out by governments and automobile manufacturers. V2V is expected to help prevent automobile accidents, by sending signals between cars. These signals provide information about the location and speed of the vehicles.

Moller International is in the process of configuring a combination ground/air vehicle. The blueprint reflects an algorithm for a car that is designed to fly over traffic. Flying cars have been around as a concept for a while, but none have actually been marketed. However, several models are projected to be on the market by 2018.

New concepts like these, from car makers working with high tech companies, will completely revolutionise the driving experience of the next generation. The evolution of green cars is expected to continue and we will have a front row seat to the creations of tomorrow.

TOP 5 JUNK FOODS YOU'LL NEVER FORGET FROM YOUR CHILDHOOD

Taking a trip down memory lane, people remember the things they love the best – and everyone has wonderful memories of their favourite junk food. Some childhood memories hold up till today because they are memories of things that are still wonderful, like delicious snacks that were fun to eat. Here are the best snacks of all, from precious childhood memories when mere pocket change could get the most delicious treats.

Marukawa Bubblegum

These little sticks of gum weren't very big, but they tasted like fruit and allowed you to blow lots of bubbles. The Marukawa Bubblegum in the black bear wrappers came with cute, fun, temporary tattoos. This was double trouble, because kids left their gum everywhere and had those "rebellious" tattoos, in addition! Some of us had to sneak these snacks because our parents didn't allow us to chew gum. This little junk food was so great because the whole purpose of Marukawa Bubblegum was to have fun.

Eyeglass Chocolate Candy

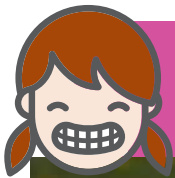

The quality of these chocolates wasn't anything to shout about, but that wasn't why we ate these candies anyway. It was because the world looked so much more interesting when you looked at it through one of these cheap little foil-and-plastic candy wrappers. Which Malaysian kid of the past decades hasn't used these eyeglasses and imagined that they were a superhero or movie star?

Ding Dang, Tora & Jojo Chocolate Biscuits

Admit it – we bought these simply for the toys inside. Every month or so, a new toy – of ridiculously cheap construction – would be included inside the box with these chocolate snacks. The combination of chocolate stimulant and curious little toy was just too much for any kid to resist. Couple that with the cheap price of these snacks, and you had a situation where every school kid was popping these peanuts.

Roti Ais Krim

Besides the branded snacks marketed to us as kids, there were generic snacks like roti ais krim, that were usually purveyed by hawkers on bicycles, who waited outside schools to cater to the kids arriving or leaving by the hundreds. Three scoops of ice cream wrapped in bread? For less than a ringgit? Who could give up on a deal like that? What's more, you got to choose your flavours and you could upgrade your roti ais krim with toppings. Huge fun for every kid!

Ice Gems

Maybe they were called ice gems, or maybe they were called pusat peng (because they looked like little bellybuttons), but everyone loved these colourful little treats. The only question was how to eat them. Should the icing be eaten first, or the biscuit? Considering their tiny size, should you just enjoy them with one happy bite? They were favourites, not just because they were delicious, but they were so much fun to eat. The main appeal of these gems was the icing on top, literally. Although they all tasted the same, the little hard sugar icing came in multicoloured hues and we as kids would eat our favourite colours.

Ice Pops / Ais Krim Malaysia

Fill a long, cylindrical plastic bag with sugared, coloured water, freeze it, and sell it to a school-going child. That's a recipe for fond memories of days gone by. These ice pops or ice lollies or ais krim tempatan – there never was a proper name for these things – could be made easily and cheaply, at home or commercially. A stick of frozen, sugary fun could be had for 10 or 20 sen, depending on how far back in time you go. Many a dreary school day was made more bearable while sucking on one of these cheap desserts.

There are many other childhood snacks of old, but these are some that every Malaysian kid knows. The one thing they have in common is that they're cheap and tasty, and they all have the ability to bring us back to our childhood days.

WEIRD SPORTS OF THE WORLD

The world of sports doesn't just start and end with what shows up during primetime on the television. There's a whole universe of professional sports out there. Some of those sports cross over into the truly weird, silly, funny, and outright bizarre. Here's a look at just a few of the weirder sports of the world.

Extreme Ironing

This sport involves one of the most mundane tasks: ironing. Except, the ironing takes place in extreme locations or situations. It was started in 1997 by a gentleman from Leicester, England, who wanted to go rock climbing instead of doing his ironing. He combined the two, and an extreme sport was born. In the ensuing years, this sport has caught the attention of the world. There are several leagues, a documentary, and competitions. In 2002, Bavaria hosted the first Extreme Ironing World Championships. Several countries participated.

Some examples of extreme ironing:

-  Ironing from a surfboard
-  Ironing while rock climbing
-  Ironing on top of trees
-  Ironing on national monuments
-  Ironing while skydiving

Participants are breaking records and finding new and exciting places to challenge. In fact, extreme ironing has ushered in a whole slew of other sports that combine extreme activities and locales with mundane tasks.

Chess Boxing

Chess boxing is a sport that combines chess with boxing; two sports that already bear some loose metaphorical connections to each other. For over a decade now, people have been sparring with their wits and their fists in this competitive sport. Opponents will take turns, boxing for one round, and playing chess for another.

- 6 rounds of chess, 5 rounds of boxing
- Matches start off with chess
- Wins are determined by KO, TKO, checkmate, exceeding time limit, resignation, or disqualification

Chess boxing has achieved a global audience, with many leagues, clubs, and organisations around the world. It's an organised sport, with weight classes and world championships. As far as obscure sports go, chess boxing is one of the more notable ones as it continues to grow in popularity around the world. There's also a slew of other hybrid sports out there similar to this one.

Bathtubbing

Bathtubbing, the weird and wacky sport of racing in bathtubs floating on water, has been around for a long time with at least one recorded first time race being held in 1967. It was the first Bathtubbing race held by the Loyal Nanaimo Bathtub Society, in which motor-powered bathtubs raced each other over a whopping 36 miles. That first event was chaos, which resulted in the creation of the first set of rules, including limiting the horsepower of the bathtubs. Bathtubbing today is not monopolised by any single organisation, and there are a few World Championships held around the world. Some use motors, and some are paddled like canoes. Variations of bathtubbing races are:

- 100-metre individual time trial – in which competitors race against the clock to see who can complete a 100-metre circuit in the shortest time.
- Multi-bathtub races – in which teams of up to 4 bathtub racers compete to be the first around a 100-metre circuit.
- Synchronised bathtubbing – in which 2 team members face each other and one paddles forward while the other paddles backward. The pair must paddle in tandem to be the first team to complete a 100-metre circuit.

There Are Many More Weird Sports Out There

There are lots of non-traditional sports out there. Many of which may seem enjoyable, or they may lead some to scratch their heads in puzzlement. In either case, remember that literally anything can become a competition. These weird sports can provide a change of pace from the primetime competitions that many have become quite bored of.

THE CHEAPEST WAY TO EAT THE MOST

A BBQ buffet allows you not only to sample a variety of meats and side dishes, but also lets you eat until you're completely full. It's the best way for you to get the most amount of food for the least amount of money. But you'll need to have a strategy when you approach the buffet so you can get all the incredible benefits, so read on for more information about what you'll find, what it'll taste like, and how you should eat it all.

What You'll Find

Cornbread, chicken, ribs, brisket, corn on the cob and pulled beef are some of the staple items you can find at a typical all-you-can-eat BBQ buffet. In addition, many places also serve a variety of fish and shellfish, along with root vegetables suitable for grilling. So, if you haven't tried a particular item, this is the best way to sample it.

BBQ sauce is both sweet and tangy, and meant to bring out the smoked qualities of the meats that have been fired to perfection.

Generally speaking, you'll see the more sugary sauces on items like pulled beef and chicken, whereas items like brisket may be served with a more savoury sauce. Ribs, you can go either sweet or savoury with, and it helps to experiment with mixing and matching sauces, if you're looking to discover your favourite one. BBQ sauce can be done a number of different ways, so it helps to experiment with lots of flavours before you settle on just one.

are your favourite. Then head to the meats, and dive right into those deliciously saucy treats. Give yourself breaks between trips up to the buffet to eat more of your favourite foods. Don't rush. This is your chance to maximise your appetite for a very cheap price, and you're going to be get more out of it if you pace yourself.

Mapping Out Your Meal

While piling food on your plate may be your first instinct, you may want to hold that thought. No matter how hungry you are, you do have limits. Instead, you may want to think about your strategy before you head up to take your place in line.

Just take a small sampling of everything you want to try at first. Make sure you try all there is to offer. You may find yourself running out of room on your plate when you finally get to the last item on the buffet spread. Whether it's an appetizer, meat, vegetable or carb, this is a chance to find out what you like the best. Start to evaluate which sauces you like the most, and which veggies

When it comes to liquids, they'll typically fill you up, so while you'll definitely want to stay hydrated, watch your intake of drinks and soups if you're trying to get the most bang for your buck. When it comes to desserts, you may find that you're having a hard time keeping up with your rapidly decreasing appetite, but it is possible to try them. Simply give yourself a rest break, and then head up to get the sweet delights at the end of your meal.

Take your time and adopt a level-headed approach to filling your stomach with as much variety as possible for your tongue. You'll eat – and enjoy – the most at a BBQ buffet, for a relatively lowest cost.

COURSE IMPROVEMENT WORK

STEP 1
Hammer-breaking the old v-drains

STEP 2
Filling up crusher-run / gravel

STEP 3
Compacting the spoon drains

STEP 4
Arranging the spoon drains

Continuously improving the Club facilities, we have taken another step forward to improve the drains of the golf course. Since the beginning, the drains beside the buggy track were constructed to collect surface water from higher slopes and cut off the water from running into the fairway and some subsoil drainage outlets connected to it. The V-drains were without reinforcement and most of them were in bad shape and without drain covers, posing a danger to golfers and golf buggies. We are constructing "spoon" drains to replace the existing drains without depriving the original function of the drains, and also widening the buggy track to allow golf buggies to drive on top and become part of the track.

A total length of 5,000 metres of the existing old drains will be converted to spoon drains. The works started in January 2017 and are expected to be completed by January 2018. All work is carried out by our in-house golf course maintenance team.

CNY Acrobatic Lion Dance Performance

11 February 2017

Keeping the tradition of letting firecrackers to mark the start of Lion dance blessing.

Chinese New Year isn't complete without the rhythm of the drums and clash of the cymbals of the lion dance. As early as 11.00 am, the crowd started to gather at the main Clubhouse lobby awaiting the start of the lion dance. Some waited patiently while the lion dance troupe went to pay respects to the Clubhouse deities, before wowing the audience with a thrilling performance of acrobatic skill and showmanship.

Coincidentally, the 15th day of Chinese New Year (aka Chap Goh Mei) fell on 11 Feb, which was an auspicious day. The lion dance troupe went around the Clubhouse, restaurants, shop lots, sports facilities, and ended with the blessing at the administrative offices.
